Author Bio

According to his wife, Robert has spent too much of his life studying. She has a point as he has earned seven tertiary qualifications. Robert has degrees in psychology, sociology, biology and education, all of which inspire his writing. He lives in Melbourne with his wife and two children. He likes writing stories that involve science and that shift the perspective of the reader. When he was in high school, a dare escalated a little too quickly and he made the state final in an interpretive dance competition.

Key Sales Points

- Includes the Wordfest 2017 'Highly Commended' story Sever-Reign.
- The author uses his background in education and academia to write speculative stories that are fun and "deceptively educational of the human condition."
- Supported by a strong marketing campaign.
- From the author of Incite Insight.

As the characters' views change,
yours might too.

This twelve story collection is centred around the theme of being altered by a situation. In the acclaimed How to Win a War, a soldier experiences a strategy for ending wars that might just work. In The Patriotic Amnesiac, a mother voluntarily gives up her ability to form new memories with far-reaching consequences. A Queen and a Prime Minister plot against a President in Sever-Reign. The Legend of Legend is a light-hearted caper about an egg that contains a universal truth. In the dystopian The Second Fear a ministry attempts to produce fear in someone who is literally fearless. In the closing story, Devilish Tricks, a deal with the Devil changes Casimir Hendrix' life, but is it for the better?
